PREFATORY NOTE

The literature relating to railways is found to a considerable extent in books, pamphlets, and other publications which have been privately issued, and much of it is buried in official reports, committee hearings, and government documents. It comprises comparatively few comprehensive treatises.

Therefore the student of railway transportation finds it impossible to secure access to any all-embracing sources of information in any one of even the largest general libraries.

The Bureau of Railway Economics has undertaken to record the works relating to the economics of railway transportation that are catalogued in thirteen of the principal libraries, together with those in its own collection.

As only the catalogued material in these libraries is here recorded, this is in no sense a complete bibliography. The literature in periodicals, in collections of miscellaneous papers, in general works containing railway material, and in all but the most important state and federal documents is thus omitted from the present record.

Certain classes of material, such as guides, time-tables, tariffs, maps and atlases, books on general railway law, law cases and briefs, have also been omitted, while certain works of a more or less technical nature have been included because of the historical or economic significance of part of their contents.

Titles are entered but once and under rather broad classification, but an index of names is supplied. So far as practicable the catalogue usage of the Library of Congress has been followed.

<sup>2</sup> A list of the reports of the railroads of the United States, Canada, and Mexico in the fourteen libraries included in this catalogue. The reports of railroads of other countries are listed under the names of those countries.

The reports are listed by the year for which issued, which may be either fiscal or calendar; the addition of the name of a month signifies that the report is semiannual or otherwise varies from a regular annual issue.

No attempt has been made to indicate changes in the name of a railroad, the reports being listed alphabetically according to the corporate title at the time of issue.

MUCH of the literature relating to railways is scattered through books, pamphlets, and other publications which have been privately issued, and much is buried in official reports, committee hearings, and government documents. There are comparatively few comprehensive treatises. The student of railway transportation finds it impossible to secure access to any all-embracing sources of information in any one of even the largest general libraries.

In the present work the Bureau of Railway Economics has undertaken to list the works relating to the economics of railway transportation that are catalogued in thirteen of the principal libraries of this country, together with those in its own collection. Except for material existing in these libraries but not catalogued, and for the literature to be found in periodicals, in collections of miscellaneous papers, in general works containing railway material, and in some of the less important state and federal documents, this work can fairly lay claim to being a representative bibliography in the field of railway economics.

The Table of Contents is very comprehensive (see page 4 of this circular) and makes easy an almost instant reference to any subject or class of works that may be desired. The value of the book as a work of reference is greatly enhanced by a complete index (25 pages) of the names of all authors.

It is confidently believed that the work will prove valuable to all who are interested in the literature of the various phases of railway transportation. It is recommended alike to the economist and to the practical railroad man as a guide and an aid in his work for which the need has long been felt.

From W. Dawson Johnston, Litt. D., Librarian, Columbia University, New York

I am very glad to hear that you are planning to publish your collective bibliography. No bibliography, as you know, is more valuable than a collective bibliography, and no collective bibliography is more valuable than a published one. You will give students of railway problems a research tool such as no other students have.

*From Theo. W. Koch, Ph.D., Librarian,
University of Michigan, Ann Arbor*

I congratulate the Bureau of Railway Economics library on the idea of issuing a collective bibliography of economic railway literature. The next best thing to having material of this sort in one's own library is to know where it can be had. With the enormous output of the technical press of today it is impossible for libraries to keep up with all lines and so the collective bibliography will have to be relied upon more and more. We have several courses in transportation and railway management at the University of Michigan and I anticipate quite a demand for your bibliography on the part of our research students and members of the faculty.

*From Clement W. Andrews, Librarian,
The John Crerar Library, Chicago*

I understand that you are contemplating the issue of a collective bibliography of the works on Railway Economics in your own library and those other libraries which have made special collections on this subject.

I have consulted with the Reference Librarian and Cataloguer, and find that they both agree with me in thinking that this piece of work would be very useful. Our experience with similar collective lists has been such as to lead us to value them highly on account of their convenience, and this would be especially true of a list on this particular subject. The material is so scattered, and even the largest collections are so fragmentary that the catalogue of any one institution is insufficient. Moreover, the material is of a character which is with difficulty brought out in the ordinary catalogue, does not appear at all in the trade lists, and is not covered by the depository catalogues of the library of Congress. The list would therefore be of value to the bibliographer and cataloguer, as well as to the student; and while there would be some perplexing questions of arrangement to be considered and decided, still Mr. Johnston's experience would guarantee the solution of these problems in a satisfactory manner.

*From P. L. Windsor, Librarian,
The University of Illinois*

Your plan of issuing a collective bibliography of economic railway material is a good one. One of the defects of our library equipment generally, so far as research work goes, is our inability to locate a book which is not on our own shelves. The investigator frequently buys a book or borrows one from a distant library, or goes without it, when all the time the needed copy could have been found in some near-by library if the contents of that library were but better known. I am sure that in the University of Illinois library such a list as you are proposing to issue will be of considerable use to professors and advanced students in the subject of transportation.

From Leroy Stafford Boyd, Librarian, Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington

Your proposition to print a bibliography of railroad publications contained in the large libraries of the country is a monumental undertaking, the accomplishment of which will not only reflect great credit upon its compiler but will render an inestimable service to librarians and others who have occasion to consult publications upon railroad subjects.

A REVIEW OF RAILWAY ECONOMICS

A Collective Catalogue of Books
In Fourteen American Libraries

Prussian Ministry of Public Works.

The Bureau of Railway Economics, Washington. Railway Economics. A collective catalogue of books in fourteen American libraries. Printed by the University of Chicago Press, May, 1912. x, 445 pp. 8°.

During recent years in the United States of America there has been much investigation and discussion of railways on their economic side. The causes for this are to be found in the unsatisfactory conditions in railway affairs, rates, financial management, relations with employees, etc., and also in the repeated attempts which have been made to improve recognized evils by means of Federal and State laws. In all this discussion one thing was felt to be more and more needed. Although there are many thoroughly trained men in the United States who are engaged in railway matters, men educated in both practice and theory, a deep knowledge of the inner meaning of railway affairs is lacking among the people and in the legislative bodies. Even the great railway systems and their heads manage chiefly according to their own experience and according to custom, not according to general fundamental principles. Moreover, there has been lack of an exact knowledge of the railways of other countries, and therefore of the possibility of making comparisons and conclusions from foreign experience to aid in handling the home railways.

These needs were considered at a meeting of railway presidents in the spring of 1910. To meet them it was decided to create a new organization, which should have for its object the investigation of the economic situation of the railroads of the United States and of other countries and should make the results of its investigations broadly accessible. For this purpose a bureau was established under the name "The Bureau of Railway Economics," which was opened on the first of August, 1910, and can thus look back now on an activity of more than two years. The presidents of six of the largest railway systems are members of the committee and the managing director is Logan G. McPherson, a specialist in railway affairs, well known to readers of this journal, and extremely well trained in both practical and theoretical lines. At the head of the statistical department is Frank Haigh Dixon, a specialist also well known to us through numerous works, statistical and otherwise, and Richard H. Johnston, recently of the Library of Congress, is librarian. The Bureau is situated in Washington. Its duty has been to keep in close touch with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and also to work over the publications of that Commission and make the results clear to the widest circles.

The Bureau began its work immediately after opening. It publishes monthly statistics of American railways based on the monthly reports filed by the railways with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and has published a number of monographs, some of them most valuable. In some of these strictly American conditions are treated and in others comparisons between American and other railways are drawn up from a strictly scientific point of view. The newest and most comprehensive publication is the one named at the head of this article, a catalogue of the literature on the economic side of railway affairs. It contains a systematically arranged collection of titles of the contents of 14 American libraries, among them 9 university libraries, the Library of Congress, the library of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and that of the Bureau itself. With each entry there is a notation showing in which libraries the book is to be found.

The arrangement of the catalogue is as follows: In the first division (to page 140) are general works on the development and history of railways, biographies of individuals, and then works on the various departments of railway science (railways and the state, administration, operation, and traffic). The second division has to do with the railways of the respective countries, among which those of the United States and of the other American countries fill the largest space (pp. 141-348); then follow Europe (pp. 349-400), Africa, Asia and Australia. In a special division (pp. 412-424) are collected periodicals and official proceedings and at the end is an alphabetically arranged list of names, which makes the use of the catalogue most convenient.

An inspection of the work shows how rich the collections of the United States are in railway literature, and not only in that of the railways of the United States, which appears to be fully represented, but also in that of other countries. A large number of older works, rare even among us, on the history of the English, German, French, and other railways, are to be had in American libraries. On the other hand, I miss almost entirely the literature of the international railway freight law, and the commentaries of Gerstner, Rosenthal, Blume and others are not mentioned. Only the bulletin of the central office at Bern is to be found. The name of Eger, a man of remarkable production in various fields, is missing.<sup>1</sup> It is just the railway freight law, and especially the international freight law of middle Europe, that should be of particular interest for railway specialists and teachers of political economy in the United States. Further, the libraries do not have that very valuable history of the railroads of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy, together with the two continuation volumes.<sup>2</sup> These are omissions which struck me as I examined the book and which do not at all lessen its value. But perhaps the Bureau of Railway Economics will take occasion to examine the catalogue of the Library of the Prussian Ministry of Public Works and thereby enlarge the contents of its own collection so far as its means allow.

The work is intended to serve as an aid in the study of railway matters, and for this purpose, according to my opinion, it is excellently suited, not only in the United States, but also in other countries. For the European specialist the lists of American works are particularly useful. The make-up is excellent, the print clear and plain. In Germany the book is to be obtained through Th. Stauffer in Leipzig, Universitätsstrasse 26, the representative of the University of Chicago Press.
